SAINT LEO - This upcoming graduation marks a farewell, not only to graduating seniors but some administration, as well. It is with great sadness that after eight years of excellence at Saint Leo University, the community is losing one of its finest leaders, Dr. Douglas Astolfi.

Astolfi has been servicing as the University's Vice President for Academic Affairs, but recently has been appointed the new president of Saint Martin's College in Lacey, Washington and will be starting his new position July 1.

Throughout his time at the University, Astolfi has influenced numerous students, faculty, and staff. He has taught several courses and participated in a number of community activities. Astolfi has also secured several significant grants and scholarships for the school and enhanced numerous academic programs.

Dr. Arthur Kirk, president of the University, praised Astolfi for his leadership which has strengthened many programs at the school and contributed greatly to the growth and prosperity of the community.

"We are delighted that St. Martin's College recognized the exceptional talent and vast experience Dr. Astolfi possesses" says Kirk. "They made a brilliant choice for president; he will lead them exceptionally well."

"We are very sorry that Saint Leo will not have the benefit of his considerable talents and commitment, but thank him for his incredible service and accomplishments these last eight years" adds Kirk who is thrilled for his friend and colleague. It is evident that Astolfi will be greatly missed by everyone at Saint Leo.

"It has been really wonderful working with Dr. Astolfi the last four years," says Bridget Bean, secretary of Academic Affairs. "He's got real integrity and cares passionately for his students and faculty, as well as being highly intelligent and hardworking. The people at St. Martins are getting a really exceptional president, and I'm sure we'll miss him even more than we can imagine at this point."

His biography on the Saint Leo website includes his favorite quote from Martin Luther King, "The ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands in moments of comfort and convenience but where he stands at times of challenge and controversy."

After getting to know him in the last several months, it is evident that Astolfi will face his upcoming challenges with grace and integrity, distinguishing him as a man we can all be proud to have known.

The community of Saint Leo and surrounding neighbors wishes him a heartfelt farewell and much luck in all his future endeavors. Thank you, Dr. Astolfi.

Graduation requires passion

BY ELIZABETH TROJANOWSKI
Lions' Pride Staff

SAINT LEO - I am two years shy of a decade in achieving what most succeed in accomplishing within four years of college: graduation. I guess it's true what they say about life, sometimes, getting in the way. But as graduation day approaches, my mind wanders back to all the moments it has taken to get to this point.

There is a reason why the road less traveled is usually the road not taken. Its path is dense with struggle and thick with condescension. I learned this quickly when my husband and I decided to get married at 18. I think back now, and I cannot believe what an easy decision it was to make. There were so many voices of opposition who told us to think practically and who tried to reason with us; but we simply embraced our emotions and our passion to make things work. Today, it is our commitment to that embracement that, throughout our lives together, has helped us to reach our eight year anniversary (which is coming up in July). When we are passionate about something, there is nothing that can stop us. Together, we have helped each other get through school and accomplish both our goals.

As I reflect on the classes I have had, and the people I have met at Saint Leo University, I also think about the amazing talent I have had the privilege to experience. Being an English major, I have been lucky enough to get to read anything from brilliant short stories to powerful poems from famous authors as well as remarkable students. Though some voices started out silent and subtle, over time they have been courageous enough to share the magic of their artistic genius with me, and I hope will continue to do so in the future. It is that spirit that has helped them embrace a passion within themselves that will serve as inspiration for countless others.

There is one word that encompasses all that it has taken to get to this day of commencement. There is one word that describes the courage, determination, the sacrifice, the hard work, and the struggle we all have had to endure and overcome in the past years. That word is passion. It is our embracement of passion that has helped us write beyond the scope of our pens and will, even still, allow us to reach further than the limitations of reality into the hopes of our dreams. For without that passion, indeed, the world is well lost. Thank you for unleashing that passion and sharing in this experience. I wish you all congratulations on this day and good luck for tomorrow.

Cherish each moment you are still in college

JANET LEVIC
President, Student Government Union

SAINT LEO - Looking back at the past four years as a Saint Leo University student, I have realized that these years have been inspiring and amazing. Not only have I met wonderful individuals who I have grown to love, but also I have been able to develop academically, spiritually, and throughout classroom involvements.

I feel confident in saying that Saint Leo University has been a life changing experience for all of us in some way. Even though we, as the class of 2005, must graduate and begin to embark on our new journeys, we will always be members of the Saint Leo University family. No matter where we are in the future, we will be bonded by the ties we have at Saint Leo.

To the future graduating classes at Saint Leo, cherish each moment while you are still in college. This experience is one of a kind. Be a sponge and soak in all the experiences and lessons you can learn while here at Leo. Although I will not be taking classes or acting as the SGU President anymore, I will always have Saint Leo University close to my heart and all the individuals who I have met along the way. I am amazed and inspired every day by the phenomenal people I meet.

Thank you for allowing me to serve you the past four years. I am completely honored and humbled to have been given the opportunity to share all the gifts and joys with the Saint Leo family and wish you all great successes no matter where God leads you.

An evening of awards hosted by SGU

SGU honors members of the Saint Leo community for their dedication.

BY MICHAEL BROCHU
Lions' Pride Staff

SAINT LEO - Once each year the Student Government Union (SGU) hosts an evening awards ceremony to honor members of the Saint Leo community for their impeccable acts of leadership and dedication to the university. At 7pm on April 21 SGU hosted a dessert awards reception. Awards were presented by Student Government Union, Intramurals, Campus Ministry, and Student Affairs.

Student Government honored students by naming individuals as Outstanding Male and Female Freshman, Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors of the year. The recipients of these awards were Mary Major and Julian Celifie for Outstanding Freshman; Amanda Davis and Kenrick Roberts for Outstanding Sophomores; Alex Jesurum and Katie Connolly for Outstanding Juniors; and Michelle Hannas and Stan Kaszuba for Oustanding Seniors.

"I was surprised, honored, and greatful for being chosen to win the award as Oustanding Freshman Female of the Year," stated Mary Major.

Additonal awards presented by SGU included the highest awards given to graduating seniors by the Student Government Union; the Rebecca L. Buller Award, presented to graduating senior John Semeraro and the Tobey Award, presented to graduating senior Denyve Duncan.

Dr. Doug Astolfi was awarded the Dr. Robert Ackerman Award for Outstanding Administrator; Dr. Randy Criss was awarded the Maura Snyder Outstanding Faculty Member Award; and Rebecca Dyke of Plant Operations was awarded the Beth G. Evans Outstanding Support Staff Member Award.

Organizations were also awarded by SGU for their strong efforts this past year. Samaritans earned the title of Outstanding Club, while Tau Kappa Epsilon was named Outstanding Fraternity of the Year. Alpha Sigma Tau claimed the title of Outstanding Sorority for the fourth consecutive year.

"We are very proud of accomplishments this year. We started the year with 8 members and now boast a membership of 30 dedicated members. It took a lot of work, but we are thrilled that Tau Kappa Epsilon was named Outstanding Fraternity by SGU," stated James Blade, president of the Sigma-Theta colony of Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Club officers and advisors were recognized for their efforts as well. Jermaine McCray was named Oustanding Club Officer for Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. Dr. Stephen Baglione was named Outstanding Club Advisor for his role in American Marketing Association.

Dr. Dadez presented awards on behalf of the Division of Student Affairs. Ivy Huang, Jeny St.Laurent, Janet Levic, Maria DeMaio, and the Office of Campus Ministry were awarded for their demonstration of the Benedictine Values which Saint Leo promotes.

Two additional awards were presented to two graduating seniors. The recipient of the Abbot Marion Bowman Activities Award, an award given to a member of the graduating class whose participation and leadership in extracurricular activities has been of the highest order, was awarded to Michael Brochu. Janet Levic was the recipient of the John I. Leonard General Excellence Award. This award is the highest University co-curricular award given to the member of the graduating class who best embodies the qualities of character, scholarship, service, leadership, and general excellence for which Saint Leo University stands.

The evening concluded with a surprise full reception complete with a chocolate fountain, an ice sculpture, roast beef carving station, and a variety of elegant desserts and finger foods, as well as live music.

"The reception was amazing. I felt like I was at an after party for the Grammy's," stated Eric Vaughn, assistant director of Career Services.

SGU Leadership Conference Makes Waves

BY MICHAEL BROCHU
Lions' Pride Staff

SAINT LEO - Twice each year, the Student Government Union (SGU) of Saint Leo University hosts leadership conferences for the student leaders of the various organizations recognized by SGU.

On Saturday, April 9, while many students lay snug in their beds, 109 student leaders from throughout campus met at campus safety to be whisked off to this semester's leadership conference, located at Fort Desoto Park, via coach buses.

Once students arrived at Fort DeSoto, they were met by professional leadership speaker Dr. Rich Brown of PeopleMap, a company that arranges leadership speakers for workshops and conferences with the intentions of making the audience aware of what "type" of leader they are. Student leaders participated in a self-evaluation, appropriately called a "People Map," administered by Dr.Brown. Following the two-hour speaking session, Dr.Brown encouraged the group of students to continue being leaders on campus.

With the conclusion of the speaking presentation, the student leaders had lunch courtesy of Student Government and headed for the beach, which lay just yards from where the presentation took place.

"I really enjoyed the speaker. He wasn't one of those who was dynamic like ones we've seen in the past. He was very informative, and I learned a lot, especially about what type of leader that I am," stated senior Helene Ecklof.

Saint Leo students travel to Tennessee

Students travel to Tennessee to attend the Southeastern Psychological Conference.

BY DEBRA L. GAWET
Special to The Lions' Pride

SAINT LEO - During the spring semester, 14 students from Saint Leo University attended the Southeastern Psychological Association (SEPA) Conference that was held in Nashville, Tennessee, April 5-9, 2005.
These dedicated and courageous students traveled all the way from Saint Leo, Florida to Nashville, Tennessee via the SLU security vans to act as both presenters and observers of psychological research. The successful collaboration of the Psychology Club, psychology faculty, and Student Government Union (SGU) made this trip possible.

Throughout the fall and spring semesters, the Psychology Club held several fundraisers in order to raise money for the expenses of the conference. Fundraisers included: a penny drive, carwash, and 50/50 raffle tickets. SGU also kindly helped allocate money so the club was able to afford the conference. With everyone's hard work, time, and effort, the SEPA greatly anticipated conference in Nashville, Tennessee was a success.

This annual conference allows attendees to present research, attend informational sessions and panels, as well as network with other professionals in the field. It also allows both undergraduate and graduate students, as well as professors, to share their research findings with others.

This year, undergraduate psychology students, graduate counseling psychology students, and professors were able to attend the conference. The following students attended the conference: Amber Getz, Debra Gawet, April Samson, Laura Neely, Nicole Duval, Raven Lea, Kathleen Maier, Alma Roblez, Jessica Nicoll, Amanda Wills, and Danielle Bretschneider, Carrie Piechowicz, Amanda Wills, and Amber Veunt.

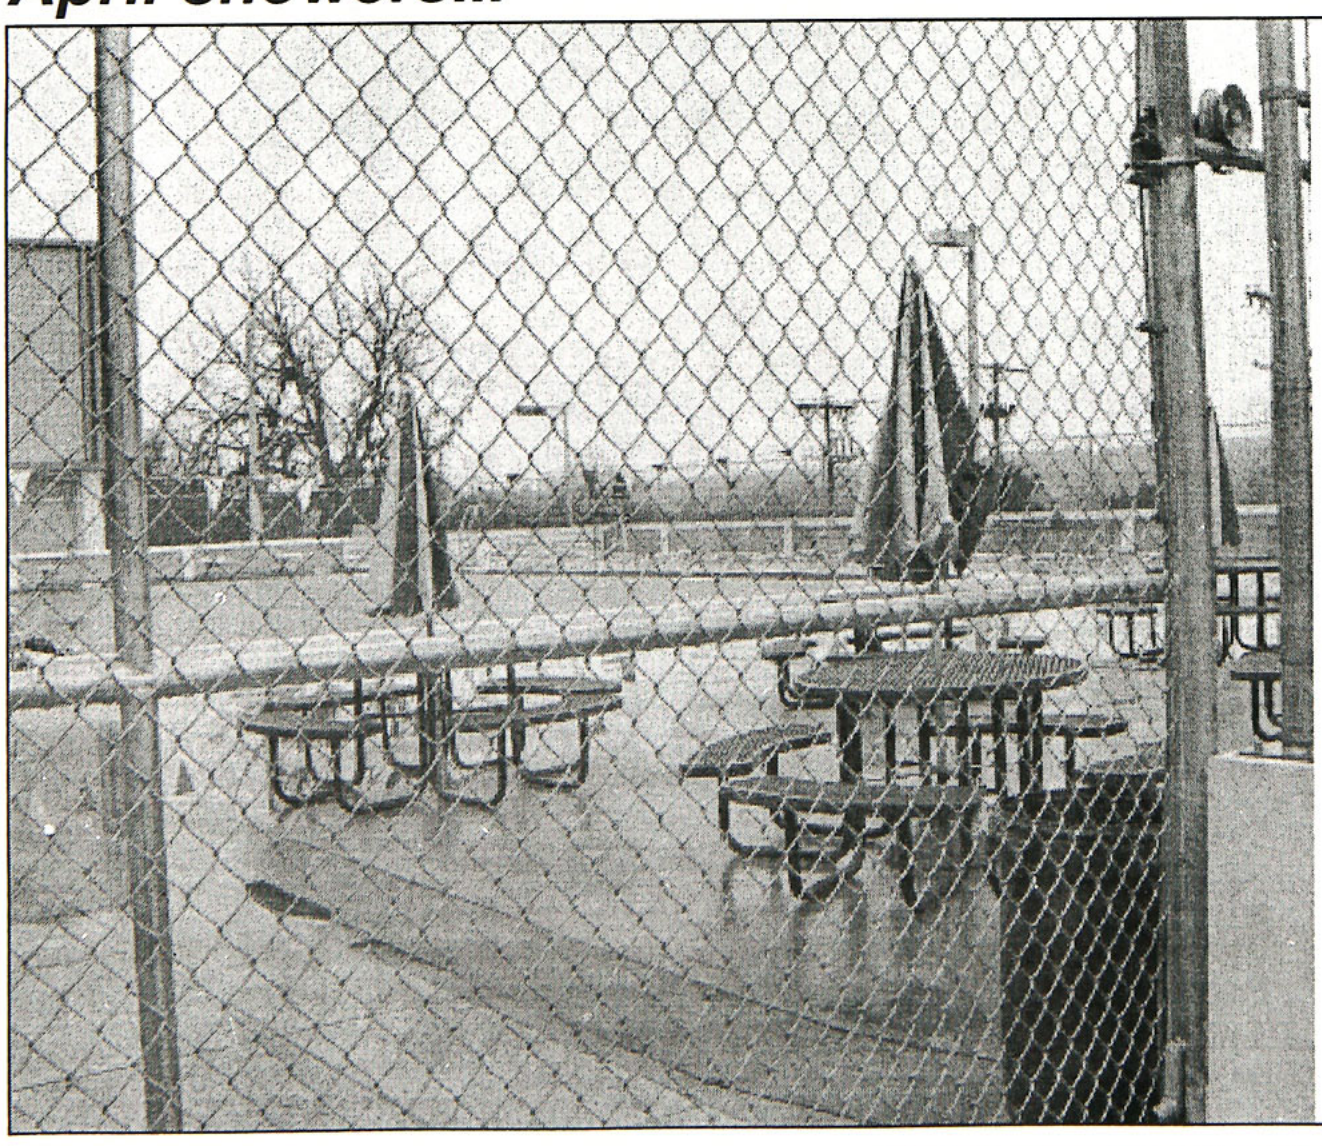
Laura Neely presented research entitled, "The Effect of Gender on Self-Presentation in Unfamiliar Social Situations," Jessica Nicoll presented research entitled, "Violence in Video Games: A Review of the Empirical Literature," and Amber Veunt presented research entitled, "The Effect of Music in Violent Movies on Aggressive Behaviors in College Students." Carrie Piechowicz presented research entitled, "A Reliability Generalization Study of the Love Attitudes Scale," and Amanda Wills presented research entitled, "The Brief Symptom Inventory: Reliability Generalization and Reliability Induction."

Several professors had an opportunity to present their research during the poster sessions at the conference. Dr. Richard Bryan, Dean of Arts and Sciences, presented researching during a poster session, entitled, "The Effects of Paper Color on Survey Responses." Dr. Kevin Kieffer, professor, and student, Amanda Wills, also presented research entitled, "The Brief Symptom Inventory: Reliability Generalization and Reliability Induction" during a poster session. Dr. Kathleen Catanese, and two colleagues, Dianne M. Tice and Roy F. Baumeister, presented research during a poster session, entitled, "The Effect of Rejection on Affiliation with Friends." Dr. Patrick Draves and colleague, Paul E. Spector, presented research during a poster session, entitled, "Moderation and Mediation of the Job Attitude-OCB Relationship."

Additionally, Dr. Christopher Cronin, Chair for the Psychology Department, hosted an informational session with a panel of SLU graduate students entitled, "Surviving Your First Year of Graduate School." During this session, six students were able to present valuable information to know when first entering graduate school.
Meagan Desrosiers presented information on "Time Management," Cornelia Reynolds presented information on "Coping with Stress," William Wolfe presented information on "Developing Self-Discipline," Melany Mendez presented information on "Finances," Tricia Thibodeau presented information on "Academic Challenges to Graduate School," and Susan Swindle presented information on "Anxiety Related to Academic Performance."

This panel allowed students not only to present the audience with helpful advice, but also allotted time for questions to be asked. The session was very successful and informative. Overall, the conference was a success, and we are very proud of the hard work and effort of the students and faculty who have attended the conference.

April showers...



During this time of year, sporadic spring showers become responsible for the cancelation of many outdoor activities. Spring brings many days of sunshine, but doesn't leave without spoiling some plans, like going to the beach or tanning at the pool.

Cigarette lighters no longer allowed on commercial airliners

BY MICHELLE KESSEL
U-WIRE (DC Bureau)

(U-WIRE) WASHINGTON — As students nationwide prepare to board airplanes headed for Spring Break destinations, there is a new item on the list that they must leave behind: Cigarette lighters.

On Feb. 28, officials from the Transportation Security Administration, the government agency that oversees aviation security, announced that lighters would be banned on all aircraft and in all secure airport areas.

"By creating a policy to add lighters to the prohibited items, we are closing a potential vulnerability in air travel security," Rear Adm. David Stone, the TSA's assistant secretary of Homeland Security, said in a press release.

The ban reflects fears in Congress that cigarette lighters could be used to ignite bombs on planes or otherwise damage or destroy them. In 2001, Richard Reid lit a match and tried to detonate a bomb hidden in his shoe while on a Paris-to-Miami commercial flight. Reid was charged and sentenced to life in prison in 2003 for the incident.

There will be a brief grace period before the policy is fully implemented. Starting April 14, all lighters will be confiscated at security checkpoints including butane, absorbed-fuel (Zippo-type), electric/battery-powered and novelty lighters. The ban comes as on Dec. 17, President Bush signed the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act, ordering the TSA to ban lighters.

Some students say that the ban on lighters will make them feel safer while flying.

"Safety is the most important thing when I'm flying," said Jess Simon, 18, of Pittsburgh. "I don't want someone blowing up an airplane. Banning lighters is just an extra line of protection for passengers."

Other students that smoke say that while they may be inconvenienced by the ban, they are supportive of the news security measures.

"It's much easier to have my lighter with me than have to go out and buy a new one but if it will make flying safer then I'm all for it," said Jake Sampson, 21, of San Diego.

Currently, the TSA allows passengers to carry up to four books of matches in carry-on luggage, but hope to soon add them to the list of prohibited items.

"It's not such a big deal," said Ricky Denton, 19, of Cherry Hill, N.J. "If I want to smoke at an airport or after a flight, I can just use matches."

Lighters and matchbooks are prohibited from being packed into checked-baggage.

"If I go on vacation or somewhere, I can always buy a lighter when I get there," Denton said. "I'm going to Mexico for Spring Break so when I get there I will just buy one. They only cost around a dollar or so."

Not everyone agrees with the new law, however. Some student smokers said that they will not feel any safer on a plane.

"This doesn't make me feel any better," said Adam Minkin, 20, of Boca Raton, Fla. "Matches can still be used to light things on fire. When they are banned too, maybe I'll feel a little more secure, but people who want to do damage will still always find a way to do so."

Minkin added that he has a collection of lighters that he buys as souvenirs.

"Whenever I go somewhere, I buy a novelty lighter to take back with me," he said. "Now, I won't be able to bring any back with me or give to friends."

TSA officials say that until the law will be fully enforced, they will warn passengers to leave lighters at home. Starting April 14, they will throw out all lighters at security checkpoints. The U.S. postal service considers lighters hazardous and will not handle them. Some airports have private companies that can ship home lighters for a fee.

Miles Davis

"Kind of Blue"

BY PAUL PETERSON
Lions' Pride Staff

The best selling and most influential jazz album ever made is Miles Davis' "Kind of Blue." Today, forty years after its release, it still sells 4,000 copies a week.

It is universally known as a masterpiece and has even been called "the perfect album" by producer Bob Belden. All of the recording artists involved in the music have become legends of jazz. Tenor saxophonist John Coltrane, perhaps the most well-known and influential besides Davis, was already an international star when the album was released in 1959.

"Davis was experimenting with 'modal' jazz, keeping the background of a tune simple while soloists played a melody over one or two 'Modes,' or scales, instead of busy chord progression—the usual harmonic foundation of jazz" (NPR.org). This is characteristic of Bee-bop, which is the form of jazz that most people think of when imagining the jazz club scene. "Kind of Blue" is the quintessential Bee-bop album.

Davis also used a mixture of seasoned musicians (such as himself and Coltrane) and new musicians to give the music a sense of vitality as well as of experience. Twenty-five-year-old pianist Bill Evans added the majority of this vitality. His subtle style of playing greatly complemented Davis' mellow trumpet sounds.

While the artistic input of the album is legendary, the technical aspect was not. The album, though well mixed, was recorded and copied incorrectly, causing the music to be heard in a different key than that in which it was played. After over forty years, the album was painstakingly remastered and the problem was fixed. This new version is available from Columbia.

Drummer Jimmy Cobb, the last surviving musician from "Kind of Blue, said recently, "I just listen to it and it goes inside my body, inside my spirit to all my pores. He's talking to you. He's dialoguing. Davis' music teaches us that there's great great beauty in music that can also be innovative, that can be risk taking, that can resonate across cultural lines. ... He speaks to people all over the globe."

"Umberto D"

BY PAUL PETERSON
Lions' Pride Staff

Director Vittorio De Sica's 1952 film Umberto D is hard to find, but definitely worth the search. It is the "last great film of the postwar renaissance in Italy." The post WWII film renaissance in Italy, known as the neo-realist movement, was one of the most influential periods in film history. Its influence can be seen in most films made today. De Sica, Antonioni, and Fellini were the most prominent of the Italian neo-realists. The films of this period shared themes of socialism, bare reality, proletariat oppression, and post war uncertainty. They marked perhaps the most important shift in film art to date; Realistic, documentary-like film was proven to be just as artistically important and powerful as spectacular, unrealistic films, which before this time had defined the art form. Perhaps the most quintessential neo-realist film is De Sica's classic The Bicycle Thief, the first film to win the Oscar for best foreign language film. Umberto D amply lives up to The Bicycle Thief. It is a powerful, poignant, subtle film that Vittorio De Sica himself has called "My greatest effort-the film that I prefer among all those I have made."

Umberto D follows the story of an elderly retiree, Umberto D. Ferrari, who is unable to live off his meager pension and is brushed aside by society. He is being evicted from his house of twenty years by his callous, selfish land lord, a woman he has known since she was an affectionate child, but who changed drastically as a result of the war. Pawning all of his sorry possessions still leaves him far from his debts. He tries to beg, but cannot bring himself to that and cannot face life in the poorhouse. He has very few options on how to finish up his life.

The film centers around Umberto's relationship with his dog named Flag. There are so many touching scenes. This relationship is reminiscent of the French film The Red Balloon, and certainly it would be interesting to watch these two films in conjunction with one another. Umberto's relationship with the beautiful young maid, who is the only person on the earth who truly cares for Umberto, is also a central part of the film. Sadly, the maid is treated like a dog by the three most important people in her life, her employer, Umberto's landlady, and the two possible fathers of her unborn child.

The most beautiful scenes of this movie are: the hospital scene, when the maid selflessly visits Umberto, the scene when Umberto finally realizes that his eviction is inevitable, and the ending. The poignant and tender ending is the triumphant high point of the film. It is very emotional, and eventually very happy. Flag the dog gives a pantomime performance the likes of Charles Chaplin.

Umberto D is a fantastically subtle film. It deserves a prominent place in film history and is a fine example of the emotional power that realistic movies can have.

Saint Leo bids farewell to its senior athletes.

BY MATTHEW McGOWAN
Lions' Pride Staff

Saint Leo University is sad to send away its seniors, and the athletic department is equally sad to see its loss.

Overall, the sports department is going to see the loss of 41 student athletes in 13 of its athletic teams. The only team not graduating any members is the men's cross country team. The team that is losing the most is the baseball team, who had nine seniors on the squad.

The men's soccer team is losing six players. They include season leading scorer Tony Rosso and captain Neil Laxdal. Other players include midfielder Titou Fierro, defender Kyle Crawford, forward Gus Kalathakis, and defender Lorne McPherson. The seniors collectively had 25 points and 3576 minutes among them. The seniors led the Lions to a 10-5-1 record.

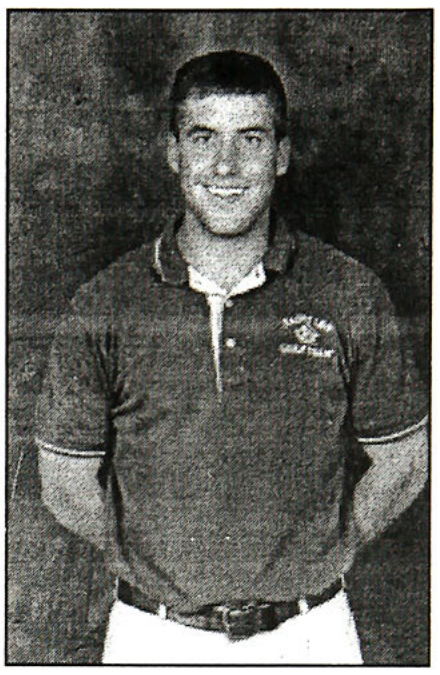
The women's soccer team had three seniors for their best season in Saint Leo history. The three student athletes are forward Sara Morrow, midfielder Charlotte Edwardson, and forward Caron Lumbra. Lumbra was the leading scorer from the senior class with four goals and three assist for eleven points. She also led the seniors in minutes with 1321. The women's soccer team had a sensational year and ended with a 10-6-0 record.

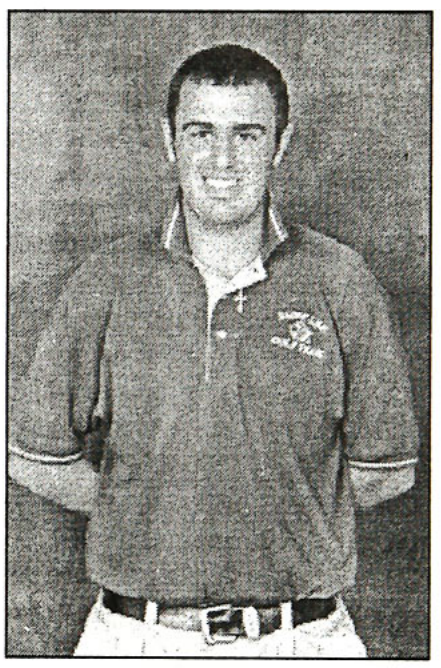
The Leo volleyball team had two seniors this year in Robbie Beach and Jennifer Sessa. The volleyball team had a great year this season with a 15-19 record. The seniors definitely played their part. Beach ended the season with 109 kills, 1231 assists, 243 digs, and 30 blocks. Beach set a school record for assists with 3,078 and ended her career third in school history for assist per game. Sessa had 25 kills, 3 assists, 9 digs, and 21 blocks on the season.

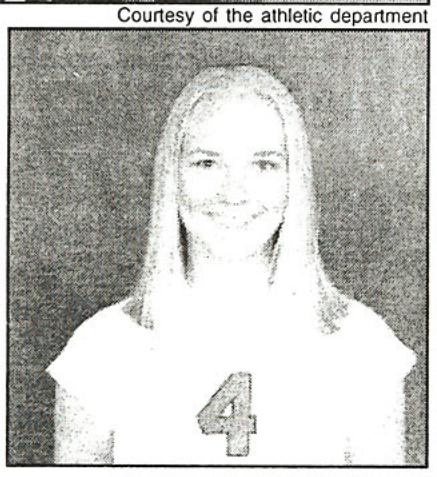
The men's basketball team had three seniors on the team this season with Narada Caldwell, Jackie Lemons, and Larry Henderson. Henderson led the seniors with 11.2 points per game. Lemons had the most rebounds among the seniors with 182. Caldwell led the seniors in the assists category with 114. The basketball team ended up with a 13-16 record.

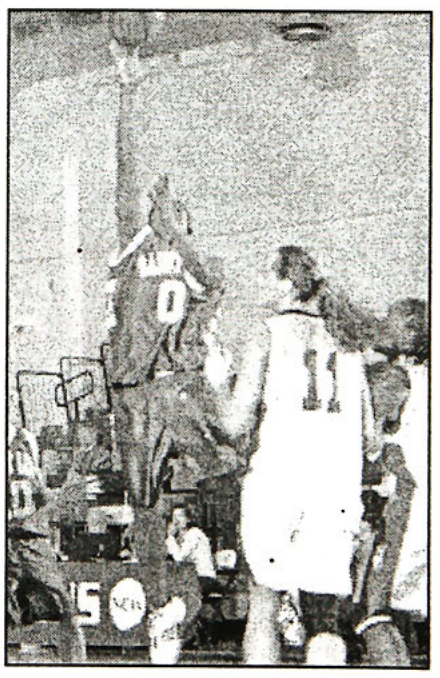
Courtesy of the athletic department

Clockwise: softball seniors: Ashley Black, Heather Gamlin (seated), Mindy Miltner (standing with no bat), and Denyve Duncan; golf seniors: John Semararo and Marc Bayrum; Rosetta Little (basketball); Narada Caldwell (basketball); and Robbie Beach (volleyball)









The women's basketball team is graduating two of its players from the past year. They are Rosetta Little and Patrice Bonilla. Little ended her last season with 11.9 points per game, 219 rebounds and 42 assists. Bonilla had 8.0 points per game, 41 rebounds, and 52 assists. The Lions ended their season with a disappointing 1-26.

The Saint Leo baseball team is going to have to do the most rebuilding next year, losing nine seniors this year. Matt Graziano leads the seniors with a .235 batting average and 2 homeruns. Steve Boychuk leads the senior pitchers with a 2.53 earned run average. Danny Hawkins has the most strike outs thrown amid the seniors with 48. The baseball team at the time of publication were 20-20 and on the right track to the post season.

The Lion's softball team has the very veteran leadership of five seniors. They include Heather Gamlin, Mindy Miltner, Wendy Geer, Ashley Black, and Denyve Duncan. Denyve is the best hitter of the seniors with a .333 batting average and 9 runs batted in. Heather Gamlin is the best senior pitcher with a 8-5 record, a 1.13 earned run average, and 81 strikeouts. The softball team at the time of publication was 33-11 and doing very well in conference and non-conference play.

Other seniors are Mary Beth Morrison and Amber Getz from women's cross country, Copley Gerdes from the swim team, John Semararo and Marc Bayrum from the men's golf team, Marlena Pogue and Carrie Neal from the women's golf team, B.J. Grant and Adrian Nakayana from the men's tennis team, and Iskra Nikolovska and Nikki Prack from the women's tennis team.

Overall, we wish all of our seniors well and good luck in whatever life brings them after their careers at Saint Leo.
